Let's be clear about what this site is — and what it isn't.

We publish content about affiliate marketing, digital advertising tools, performance platforms, and the companies behind them. What you'll find here are guides, reviews, rankings, and the occasional opinion — all written from an editorial point of view.

This isn't legal advice. It's not financial advice either. It's information, shaped by research, experience, and sometimes a bit of gut instinct.

No guarantees, no hand-holding

We try to be accurate. We try to be current. But we're not always perfect, and we won't pretend to be. Things change — affiliate programs update terms, tools go offline, companies rebrand overnight. If you base a decision on something you read here, do it with eyes open.
And if something we wrote helped — great. If not — well, we hope it at least pointed you in the right direction.

About those affiliate links

Yeah, we use them. Sometimes when we mention a service or product, there's a link that earns us a small commission if you sign up. It doesn't change what you pay. It doesn't affect how we write.

We don't do "pay-for-coverage." If a company has sponsored a piece, it'll be marked as such. You'll never have to guess.

Your judgment > our content

We're not here to tell you what to do. We're not your consultant or business partner. Use what's useful, ignore what's not. If something feels off — trust your instinct, not a headline.
Always double-check things that matter, especially if money's involved.

Links go off-site. That's their world.

Some pages on Aivix link to other websites. We don't control them. We don't run them. If you click a link and end up on a shady-looking signup page — hit the back button. We do our best to link to trustworthy stuff, but we can't guarantee what happens outside our domain.

Got questions?

We read our emails. We don't use an auto-responder. If something's unclear, or you think we got something wrong, let us know: support@aivix.com

That's it. Thanks for reading.
